Program Scope

The focus of the dance program in the School of Theatre and Dance is to study dance as an art form. The Bachelor of Arts in Dance provides professional preparation in dance and an opportunity to study dance performance, choreography, teaching, and dance theory. The goal of the program is to help students develop strong foundational skills and knowledge necessary for a variety of professional careers. SF State dancers have established their own companies, performed with professional companies, developed careers in K-12 education or supplemented their education with work in private dance or Pilates studios. Graduates have also successfully completed graduate dance studies at major institutions. Students with a major other than dance should investigate both the Minor in Dance and the Minor in World Music and Dance that is offered in the School of Music.

The B.A. is organized into three components: Core, Dance Technique, and Emphasis Electives. Majors must complete a 17-unit core covering basic studies, the body as an instrument, and aesthetics and history. Choices are available in the core to gear the student toward their chosen emphasis.

Technique electives offer the student a variety of styles and can be repeated for credit to optimize conditioning and development of expression. A minimum of 12 units of technique classes must be chosen, with 9 units selected from numbers above 200. The faculty recognize that most major students surpass the minimum technique credit level. Students must audition for placement into technique level and can progress to the next level with the consent of the instructor. Students in choreography and performance commonly study two technique areas each semester or study dance conditioning or Pilates in conjunction with technique.

Individualized emphasis electives should be chosen according to career goals in consultation with an advisor. These courses have been chosen and optimally organized for students who wish to pursue dance performance and choreography. Upper division technique courses may be repeated in the emphasis of performance/choreography or musical theatre up to a maximum of 6 units. Three units may be elected from another area of the university with consent of the major advisor. Students should consider the following as culminating experiences in the major: DANC 461 or DANC 399.

Dance Program Concerts

The dance program produces two concerts annually: The New Moves Student Choreography Showcase, and the University Dance Theatre.

• The New Moves Choreography Showcase debuts the work of advanced choreography students. The performance emphasizes the creative process of students experimenting with contemporary choreography and movement exploration. Many lower division majors and minors audition the first week of the fall term to perform in this show.

• The University Dance Theatre is a year-long repertory course for the advanced and versatile dancers. UDT is considered to be the pre-professional performance training company. Acceptance in the company is by audition only. UDT work with faculty and guest choreographers to learn repertory during the fall semester. The company performs on tour throughout the academic year culminating in the mainstage production in McKenna Theatre and at the American College Dance Festival.

Facilities

Dance facilities are located in three different buildings on campus. The two primary dance-teaching spaces are GYM 146 and Creative Arts 102. Adjacent to the large gym studio is a rehearsal room GYM 123. Locker rooms are available in the Creative Arts Building, near the studio, or in the gymnasium. Dance concerts are primarily held in McKenna Theatre, a 700-seat house in the Creative Arts Building. Informal performances are presented in Knuth Hall and the Studio, Creative Arts Building, Room 102.

Career Outlook

Career options for dance majors are very diverse. Majors graduating from this program move into a variety of dance-related areas including performance; choreography; musical theatre work; and teaching in public schools, private studios, and community centers. Other dance-related careers include the completion of certification programs in Pilates/dance conditioning and other somatic practices. SF State’s graduates have also been accepted into graduate schools for MFA and doctoral work. Individuals also apply their knowledge and skills gained from the study of dance to careers in arts administration and other related work in non-profit organizations.

The San Francisco Bay Area has a very active and vibrant dance, music, and theatre community with many performance ensembles, training centers, concerts, and arts service organizations. There are many ways for graduates to become involved in this larger dance and arts community.

Teaching opportunities are available throughout the region in private and public schools, private studios, and recreation centers. The State of California requires a teaching credential for employment in public schools and views dance as a subject area in the field of physical education. To earn a credential, students must follow the subject matter program in physical education with a concentration in dance, a program developed from the B.A. in Dance and from courses in kinesiology. Consult a dance advisor and the credentials page of this Bulletin for credential information.
