Program Scope
The School of Music offers both professional and liberal arts degree programs in music as well as courses that enrich the general education and cultural life of the University. The Bachelor of Arts in Music provides a humanistic approach to the study of music as a significant part of human tradition and culture. The Bachelor of Music is an intensive curriculum for qualified advanced undergraduate students seeking to attain professional levels of expertise in a specialized music discipline.

The Master of Arts in Music and Master of Music degree programs provide an advanced education for students with an undergraduate degree in music wishing to gain additional expertise in specific areas of music. The Master of Arts in Music program is for students who have highly developed interest and achievement in specific areas of music study; an interest in teaching as music faculty in two- and four-year colleges; or K-12 teachers seeking additional expertise in specific areas of music that will enhance their skills and knowledge as music educators; or, are seeking preparation for professional careers in composition and arranging. The Master of Music provides graduate study for the superior performer with the goal of maximum development of specialized skills. Either the Master of Arts in Music or Master of Music degree programs can be appropriate for students who have the goal of advanced graduate study at the doctoral level.

The School also offers two minors in music: a liberal arts minor, that provides a planned sequence of musical development from which future enjoyment and learning can proceed, and a minor in World Music and Dance, which is interdisciplinary in character.

A variety of individual and ensemble music performance opportunities are available to all SF State students, including Wind Ensemble, Jazz Band, University Symphony, Chamber Singers, Afro-Cuban Ensemble, and Women’s Chorus. A number of small and specialized vocal and instrumental ensembles that are part of the Chamber Music, Jazz and Creative Music programs are also available. The School also participates in opera and musical-theatre productions in cooperation with the School of Theatre and Dance.

Scholarships in music are available and awarded based on musical and scholastic achievement, musical promise or need. Many of these scholarships are designated for specific fields of study while others are open to music majors in any field of study. Auditions for scholarships are held two to four times each year. Students must schedule an appointment to audition for a scholarship. For further information and an application, contact the School of Music.

San Francisco State University has been an accredited institutional member of the National Association of Schools of Music since 1963.

Faculty and Facilities
Faculty in the School of Music includes internationally recognized performers, composers, music educators, authors and research scholars. Each faculty member has a strong commitment to students and brings their knowledge and expertise into the process of teaching and learning music. The world-renowned Alexander String Quartet is quartet-in-residence at SF State. The members of the quartet are faculty in the School and coordinate, along with other faculty, our unique Chamber Music program. To meet our faculty, please visit the School of Music website at: http://music.sfsu.edu.

The Music Program is housed in the Creative Arts Building. Facilities include McKenna and Knuth Theatres, seating 701 and 322 respectively; three piano laboratories; choral and instrumental ensemble rehearsal space; classroom and practice facilities; a music materials resource center containing instruments and scores; an electronic music laboratory; and a music computer lab with more than 20 workstations.

The J. Paul Leonard Library provides music listening facilities; computer access; and an extensive collection of scores, recordings, and books on music. The Frank V. de Bellis collection of Italian culture, located on the fourth floor of the library, contains historic musical instruments, rare books, musical manuscripts, and scores and archival sound recordings.

Career Outlook
Career options for music majors are very diverse. The analytical, concentration and listening skills, collaborative experiences, and broad historical and cultural knowledge gained through the study of music prepare students to achieve in many professional arenas. Their individual achievements may lead them into specific professional fields of music, including performance, composition, scholarship, teaching, or into another profession that can benefit from the knowledge and skills gained in music study.

Graduates of SF State University music programs currently perform as soloists or as members of symphony orchestras, opera, chamber ensembles, choruses, rock groups, jazz combos, and a variety of intercultural consorts. They conduct Broadway musicals, church choirs, community choruses, commercial music, operas, and symphony orchestras. Some work as composers, arrangers and producers in a wide-variety of musical environments, write recording and program notes, serve as music librarians, design and work with music technology, and work as critics and lecturers. Others teach music at every educational level from pre-school through university in independent studios and in public and private schools and colleges. They occupy key positions as music administrators and provide leadership for professional music organizations. School of Music graduates have also gone on to careers outside of music in fields as diverse as medicine, business and law. Whatever their chosen career path, the education our graduates received has provided the educational foundation they needed to provide a life filled with meaning and professional accomplishment. Wherever their careers have taken them, they continue to create, perform, analyze, write about, lobby for, and listen to music both for profit and for pleasure.

Undergraduate Programs in Music
All students wishing to pursue a major in music must pass both a performance audition on an instrument or voice, and demonstrate competency in music theory, aural and piano skills sufficient for successful music study at a four-year university. The performance audition must establish that the individual possesses music achievement adequate to effectively engage in musical performance in the School of Music. Students who pass the performance audition may demonstrate competency in music theory, aural skills and piano either through passing placement examinations or completing specific coursework at San Francisco State University. Auditions and placement examinations are given at least twice each year. Students may only audition or take placement examinations twice.

Students who pass the performance audition but fail the placement examinations in aural skills and music theory must take MUS 130 during their first semester as music students in School of Music. A grade of C or better in MUS 130 is required to satisfy the aural skills and music theory standards required to proceed in either the Bachelor of Arts in Music or the Bachelor of Music degree programs. Students who fail the placement exam in piano may complete MUS 201. A grade of C or better in MUS 201 is required to satisfy the piano standards for admission to either the Bachelor of Arts in Music or the Bachelor of Music degree programs. While satisfying aural skills, music theory and piano degree program admissions standards, students who pass their performance audition are expected to enroll in other music courses that will apply toward university degree requirements. These courses include performance ensembles and MUS 150. Please consult with your assigned music advisor about appropriate choices.

Many music courses are available only to students admitted to the Bachelor of Arts or Bachelor of Music degree programs. Certain music courses, taken to satisfy deficiencies identified by placement examinations in aural skills, music theory and piano, may not count as part of a Bachelor of Arts in Music or Bachelor of Music degree program.

All music majors are assigned a faculty advisor with whom they confer each semester to develop an appropriate program of study.

Individual instrumental and vocal applied lessons are restricted to music majors who have passed the performance audition and the aural skills and music theory placement examinations. Participation in an ensemble is required of all students enrolled in applied lessons. Students enrolled in individual voice or instrumental instruction are required to enroll in 1 unit of appropriate ensemble for each half-hour of private instruction received. Ensemble enrollments must be approved by the faculty advisor in order for them to satisfy this requirement. (Please see individual program requirements for the maximum number of ensemble units, MUS 371 - MUS 390, applicable to degree requirements.) Students must also maintain full-time enrollment in order to qualify for individual instruction. There is a limit to the total number of individual lessons each student may receive, depending on the degree program in which the student is enrolled. Students who fail or withdraw from required pre-requisite or co-requisite musicianship, theory or ensemble courses, will lose eligibility for individual applied lessons until academic requirements in those pre-requisite or co-requisite courses have been satisfied.
