

BACHELOR OF ARTS IN ETHNIC STUDIES

The BA in Ethnic Studies examines both the race-related processes that underlie many social problems and the multiple forms of resistance and struggle aimed at achieving racial social justice. Our analytical approach is comparative, relational, interdisciplinary, and intersectional. Ethnic Studies classes utilize a comparative framework, comparing and contrasting the distinct experiences of different racialized communities. At the same time, recognizing that communities do not exist in isolation from one another and that race itself is a mutually constitutive process, our classes attend to the intersections, interactions, and the complexities of identity, community formation, and social struggle. Ethnic Studies employs interdisciplinary approaches that explore the a) social, economic, and political aspects of race, and the histories of communities of color, especially in relation to resistance of social injustice, b) the realm of representation and cultural imaginary as expressed in cultural production by Communities of Color, c) examination of the ways that race, gender, and sexuality are co-constitutive, and the multiple identities that have emerged at these intersections, d) communities' own narratives about colonization, sovereignty, homeland, racialization, and exoticization, e) an examination of health and environmental inequities and how they have impacted the survival of communities of color. Ethnic Studies' interdisciplinary approach provides students with a multi-faceted understanding of various forms of oppression and struggles for change both in the US and transnationally. Our analytical framework emphasizes intersectionality, considering the ways race, gender, class, sexuality, and religion work together to erase, elide, and oppress subjects.

Ethnic Studies examines how social problems are fueled by racial and ethnic discrimination by drawing from these multiple methodologies. An integral part of our academic mission is to develop our students' understanding of resistance. Our degree will produce cohorts of highly motivated critical thinkers and socially engaged students who will use their analytic frameworks to build upon existing service and organizing work among disenfranchised communities of color in the U.S. and abroad.

Program Learning Outcomes

- Identify the history, objectives, and philosophies of Ethnic Studies, including the fields of Africana Studies, American Indian Studies, Asian American Studies, Latina/Latino Studies, and Comparative Ethnic Studies.
- Describe historical, cultural, economic, and comparative approaches to the study of race, class, gender, nation, and sexuality.
- Interpret cultural production by people of color and the ways that various forms of culture (literature, dance, murals, etc.) express the agency of oppressed peoples and/or challenge social inequalities.
- Apply the concept of intersectionality to the analysis of gender-oppressed people of color, such as women of color, queers of color, and transgender people of color.
- Analyze social movements in the contestation of social hierarchies based on race, gender, sexuality, class, and/or other social determinants.
