The English Department consists of vibrant and interdisciplinary programs to study communicative practices of cultures and writers all over the world. Our courses, whether on major literary authors or in fields such as Digital Humanities and World English(es), reflect our commitment to the study of English in global contexts. Our student-centered classrooms offer opportunities to use multiple technologies, modalities, genres, and theoretical frameworks to read critically the word and the world around us, with an eye toward writing the future.

By gaining self-reliance, empathy, and intellectual focus, our students go on to become teachers, authors, entrepreneurs, technical writers, publishers, content designers, attorneys, and activists, with exciting careers that draw on their analytic skills and their humanistic values. In addition to shepherding the next generation of critical thinkers into diverse career paths, the English Department also creates exponential change by preparing engaged and effective educators for tomorrow’s diverse classrooms.

Program Scope
The Department of English offers a BA degree (with possible concentrations in English Education, Linguistics, Literature, and Professional Writing and Rhetoric), three minors (in Linguistics, Literature, and Professional Writing and Rhetoric), two MA degrees (in English and Literature), and several certificate programs. We also house the Writing Programs, which see over 10,000 students across campus, annually.

Bachelor of Arts Degree in English
The English Department at SF State provides opportunities for students to study in a variety of subfields that make up the English major. Students in our program are part of a racially linguistically and culturally diverse community of learners engaging in dialog between our histories and experiences, and new ideas and literacies.

Concentration in English Education
Students who are interested in changing the world by inspiring and teaching the next generation of critical readers and writers enroll in the English Education program. In this program, students develop the subject matter knowledge needed to enter credential programs and become an English language arts teacher at the secondary level.

Concentration in Linguistics
Students who are interested in human language and how we communicate with one another enroll in the Linguistics program. In this program, students acquire the tools to discover how language structures the way we think and communicate with others and be well prepared for advanced graduate work and/or careers in the tech industry, government, and research, translation, forensics, lexicography or advertising.

Concentration in Literature
Students who are interested in the power of literature to expand our minds and to tell us about ourselves and the collective human experience enroll in the Literature program. In this program, students delve deeply into historically grounded study of literatures written in English from around the world and become skilled readers and thoughtful critics well prepared for advanced graduate work and/or careers in teaching, public relations, law, advertising, or business.

Concentration in Professional Writing and Rhetoric
Students who are interested in how writing can be designed, produced, and read to persuade, inform and enlighten enroll in the Professional Writing and Rhetoric major. In this program, students master the written communication, design, and editing skills for employment in almost every field of industry and public life, including technology, business, government and research, and non-profit organizations.

Minors in English
The English Department offers three different minors for undergraduate students. Students interested in a minor in English can choose to concentrate in Linguistics, Literature, or Professional Writing and Rhetoric.

Masters of Arts Degree in English Literatures
The MA Program in English Literatures prides itself on its intellectual rigor, diversity of subjects and approaches, and commitment to excellence in teaching. Our course offerings balance traditional literary history with new work in such fields as postcolonial studies; food studies; digital literacies; environmental humanities; cultural studies; literature and psychology; narrative, lyric, and performance theories; and feminist studies. Students in our program have the flexibility to design and personalize their master’s program to meet their diverse interests and provide opportunities for professionalization in the field.
Masters of Arts Degree in English: Composition

The Masters in English with a Concentration in Composition provides a strong foundation in the research, theory, and practices of teaching academic writing and reading. Seminars draw on the rich interdisciplinary scholarship that comprises “writing studies,” to help students develop effective and well-grounded teaching approaches. Seminars focus on designing courses, units, assignments, and prompts; assessing, grading, and responding to writing; using technology to enhance teaching and learning; planning day-to-day classroom activities; and working with diverse student populations, with an emphasis on equity, access, and social justice. Throughout the program, students critically examine their own experiences and assumptions regarding academic literacy and integrate their insights with knowledge from the field. The program includes a supervised teaching experience; most MA students apply to teach a first-year composition course at SFSU to fulfill this requirement.

Masters of Arts Degree in English: Linguistics

The Master of Arts in English with Concentration in Linguistics provides students with a solid grounding in the tools of language analysis. The course offerings in contemporary linguistic theory cover a broad spectrum of the levels of linguistic structure: phonetics, phonology, morphology, syntax, semantics, discourse analysis, psycholinguistics, and sociolinguistics. Since the program allows considerable choice in coursework beyond a basic set of core requirements, the student in consultation with an advisor can plan a program to suit individual interests and career requirements.

Master of Arts in English: Teaching English to Speakers of Other Languages (TESOL)

The Master of Arts in English with Concentration in Teaching English to Speakers of Other Languages (TESOL) is offered as a result of a local, national, and international demand for persons prepared to communicate in English as a second language. This concentration includes work in literature and foreign languages, with electives in education and the social sciences, as well as specialized work at an advanced level in linguistics and language teaching. The concentration provides training for teachers and a suitable background for supervisors and others responsible for the preparation of materials and courses of study in English as a second or foreign language.

English Certificate Programs

Certificate in Computational Linguistics

The Certificate in Computational Linguistics is designed to provide academic training in the study of computational approaches to language analysis. The curriculum assumes no prior linguistic or programming knowledge and introduces students to a variety of computational methods and their theoretical underpinnings including: writing programs in Python to process raw texts (tokenization), discovering statistical patterns in linguistic data (frequency distribution), performing part-of-speech tagging, text segmentation, and classification,(context-free grammars, dependency grammars), extracting meaning from texts, and applying various machine learning methods to data mining. The certificate is open to both matriculated and non-matriculated undergraduate students.

Post-Baccalaureate Certificate in Compositional Linguistics

The Post-Baccalaureate Certificate in Computational Linguistics is designed to provide academic training in the study of computational approaches to language analysis. The curriculum assumes no prior linguistic or programming knowledge and introduces students to a variety of computational methods and their theoretical underpinnings including: writing programs in Python to process raw texts (tokenization), discovering statistical patterns in linguistic data (frequency distribution), performing part-of-speech tagging, text segmentation, and classification, (context-free grammars, dependency grammars), extracting meaning from texts, and applying various machine learning methods to data mining. The certificate is open to both matriculated and non-matriculated students who have already completed a BA degree.

Certificate in Immigrant Literacies

The Certificate in Immigrant Literacies combines cross-disciplinary study of language, literacies, and the immigrant experience with community service learning. Certificate coursework includes a focus on building and sustaining community partnerships that address real-life concerns affecting Bay Area immigrant communities. Students work on a local service-learning project throughout the Certificate sequence. MA English students may use their Certificate service-learning project towards fulfillment of their capstone requirement.

Certificate in the Teaching of Composition

The Certificate in the Teaching of Composition consists of four graduate seminars focusing on the research, theory, and practices of teaching academic writing, particularly at the postsecondary level. Drawing on rich interdisciplinary scholarship as well as current “best practices,” these seminars help students develop effective teaching approaches that are applicable to their own professional goals as teachers. The certificate places special emphasis on reading/writing integration, academic acceleration, and approaches to working with diverse student populations in community college settings.

Students enrolled in other SFSU MA programs may pursue the certificate concurrently. The program also welcomes students who already have a graduate degree or credential, but who wish to obtain additional specialization in composition. Students who have completed the certificate may apply to teach a first-year composition course at SFSU as a graduate teaching associate.

Certificate in the Teaching of Post-Secondary Reading

The Certificate in the Teaching of Post-Secondary Reading consists of four graduate seminars focusing on the research, theory, and practices of teaching academic reading. Drawing on rich interdisciplinary scholarship as well as current “best practices,” these seminars help students develop effective teaching approaches that are applicable to their own professional goals as teachers. The certificate places special emphasis on reading/writing integration, academic acceleration, and approaches to working with diverse student populations in community college settings.

Students enrolled in other SFSU MA programs may pursue the certificate concurrently. The program also welcomes students who already have a graduate degree or credential, but who wish to develop further expertise in order to participate in curricular reform efforts such as those mandated by California’s AB 705.
Certificate in Technical and Professional Writing
The Certificate in Professional Writing and Rhetoric enables students who already have Bachelor’s degrees to gain valuable technical and professional writing skills and knowledge, earn a credential in the field, and build a portfolio of professional-quality work. Many returning, mid-career students have used this certificate to transition into the field of technical and professional writing.

Career Outlook
The Bachelor of Arts in English can lead to a rewarding career in a range of fields. Students in our English Education program can develop expertise to enter credential programs and become an English language arts teacher at the secondary level. Our Linguistics students join careers in the tech industry, government, and research, translation, forensics, lexicography or advertising. Our Literature students pursue advanced graduate work and/or careers in teaching, public relations, law, advertising, or business. Students with a concentration in Professional Writing and Rhetoric seek jobs as writers, editors, desktop or multimedia publishers, information developers and designers, and/or communications managers producing and overseeing technical documentation, content management systems, training or support materials, reports or proposals, and promotions or publicity.

The Master of Arts in English Literatures serves the needs of students who seek to advance skills and knowledge in reading and writing about literature. While the program is designed to help students prepare for careers in teaching literature in community colleges or high schools in the United States or other countries, or for going on to doctoral programs, the skills developed in this program have broad application. Students considering any career that demands skills in careful reading, written and oral communication, research, and analysis may use this program as a base. Our graduates work as teachers in high schools and community colleges; enter the field of publishing; write for journals, magazines, and online publications; earn PhDs; enter law school; start their own businesses; and work for non-profits, foundations, and government agencies.

Students completing the Master of Arts in English: Composition typically either teach at community colleges or go on to doctoral work with a view to teaching at a college or university. At the university level, specialists in composition and rhetoric are in increasing demand as researchers and directors of undergraduate writing programs. Two-year colleges are increasingly recognizing the need for professional training in the teaching of composition and are hiring accordingly.

The Master of Arts in English: Linguistics prepares students for a variety of teaching and research positions in which the emphasis is on the structure of language. Graduates of the program may teach English language or writing, work in the fields of speech production or speech recognition, or go on to further study in linguistics or related disciplines.

The Master of Arts in English: TESOL prepares students specifically to teach English to non-native speakers of the language. Most graduates of the program become TESOL classroom teachers in adult education classes, public schools, intensive language programs, and colleges either in the United States or foreign countries. Others choose jobs in related areas such as program administration, curriculum design, materials writing, and teacher training.

The Certificate in Computational Linguistics provides students a foundation in linguistics while learning the basics of Python and computational linguistics methodology. Computational linguistics is primarily the study of how machines understand and process natural human language. When students complete the program they’ll be able to use computers to analyze large quantities of text — a skill that translates into positions in health care, law, public relations, and tech.

The Certificate in Immigrant Literacies program prepares students to work in community-based adult CMS/literacy settings as adult CMS teachers and/or community partners with adult CMS programs. Students who graduate with a Certificate also find jobs in related areas, including CMS curriculum development, materials writing, community-based participatory research, community organizing, grant-writing, and partnership building.

The Certificate in the Teaching of Composition prepares students for teaching composition at the advanced secondary, community college, and college levels. Many students in M.A. programs other than Composition take the certificate as a means of preparing themselves for teaching composition in two-year colleges. In addition, a number of two-year colleges and high school English teachers take the courses to develop their expertise in composition.

The Certificate in Teaching Post-Secondary Reading enables prospective and already practicing post-secondary teachers to develop their ability to meet specific individual professional needs in the area of basic literacy and reading instruction. This certificate prepares students for teaching positions in the community colleges and community agencies where specialized background and techniques are necessary.

The Certificate in Technical and Professional Writing prepares students for entry-level jobs as writers, editors, desktop or multimedia publishers, information developers and designers, and/or communications managers producing and overseeing technical documentation, content management systems, training or support materials, reports or proposals, and promotions or publicity.

This stretch version allows for extra time to revisit and practice reading and writing strategies to improve English fluency and comprehension, develop effective and varied reading strategies, and practice a variety of techniques for improving and increasing academic vocabulary.

Course Attributes:
- A2: Written English Comm

ENG 204 Effective Literacy Skills for College - Multilingual (Units: 3)
Prerequisite: Composition for Multilingual Students Advising Module.

Development of university-level reading, writing, and information literacy skills. May be repeated for a total of 6 units. (ABC/NC grading, CR/NC allowed)

ENG 208 Grammar for Writing--Multilingual (Units: 3)
Prerequisite: Must take CMSPT prior to enrolling.

Grammatical accuracy in written work. Structures typically reviewed and practiced include articles, verb forms and tenses, and sentence structure. May be repeated for a total of 6 units. (ABC/NC grading, CR/NC allowed)

ENG 209 Writing the First Year: Global Perspectives of Multilingual Speakers (Units: 3)
Prerequisite: To optimize student success, completing Write to Register is strongly encouraged.

The initial course in the first-year writing experience sequence that helps multilingual students develop academic reading and writing skills for college success. Students explore their identity and purpose within the university. Information literacy is developed through reading, analyzing, and responding to a variety of texts. Inquiry-driven expository writing is developed through four major writing projects in which students integrate and reflect on evidence from readings. Students learn to use the writing process to revise and improve their essays, and practice techniques for developing research strategies.

Course Attributes:
- A2: Written English Comm
ENG 210 Oral Communication - Multilingual (Units: 3)
Development of skills in listening, speech delivery, and preparation and presentation of informative and persuasive speeches. (ABC/NC grading, CR/NC allowed)

Course Attributes:
- A1: Oral Communication

ENG 212 Advanced Grammar for Writing - Multilingual (Units: 3)
Prerequisite: First-year Writing Advising module or recommendation from an instructor of a previously-completed Composition for Multilingual Students course.

Grammatical accuracy and variety at the sentence and discourse levels. Readings, grammatical analysis, and compositions with an emphasis on editing. May be repeated for a total of 6 units. (ABC/NC grading, CR/NC allowed)

ENG 214 Second Year Written Composition: English (Units: 3)
Prerequisite: ENG 114 or equivalent with a grade of CR or C- or better.

Development of flexible reading and writing skills for academic inquiry and for engaging with social issues. Emphasis on varied composing and revising skills, critical analysis and self-reflection with special attention to rhetorical variation, and fine-tuning research. (Plus/minus ABC/NC, CR/NC allowed) [CSL may be available]

Course Attributes:
- A4: Written English Comm II

ENG 215 Second Year Composition: Multilingual (Units: 3)
Prerequisites: Qualifying score on CMSPT and ENG 114 or equivalent with a grade of CR or C- or better or ENG 209 with a grade of CR or C- or better.

Expository argumentative composition and critical reading of nonfiction: supporting arguments with outside sources, developing revising strategies and research skills. (Plus/minus ABC/NC, CR/NC allowed)

Course Attributes:
- A4: Written English Comm II

ENG 216 Cultivating Curiosity: Explore Your World, Your Identity, and Your Future (Units: 3)
Prerequisite: GE Area A2*.

Your world is waiting to be explored. Learn how the interests that drive and shape you are awakened through discovery. Choose a topic you're curious or passionate about (pop culture, rocket science, etc.) to better understand your world, identity, and future. Apply tools of questioning, research, writing, and reflection to bring your topic to life, all while practicing effective communication to different audiences. Serves as a springboard to students' majors and future lives through writing that makes a difference in your communities and leads to personal and professional success. [CSL may be available]

Course Attributes:
