The Department of Humanities and Comparative World Literature houses the following interdisciplinary programs:

- American Studies (B.A. and minor)
- Comparative Literature (M.A.)
- Comparative World Literature (B.A. and minor)
- Humanities (B.A., minor, and M.A.)
- Video Game Studies (minor)

Our faculty are accomplished humanities and literature scholars who are committed to exploring arts and ideas across boundaries typically dividing the study of nations, historical eras, languages, and forms of cultural expression. Our students gain broad cultural literacy as well as strong skills in writing and thinking critically about the forms of representation that shape our worlds and perspectives.

American Studies
American Studies is a cross-disciplinary program (B.A. and minor) that presents students with the opportunity to individualize their curriculum and draw from the many programs across our campus that focus on U.S. culture and society. The major’s goal is for students to explore the unity and diversity, the consensus and conflict, and the continuity and change that characterize the many cultures and social structures of the past and present United States. Each student takes core courses in arts and culture, geography, and California studies. With help from a program advisor, they create an individualized set of elective courses drawn from across the University to pursue a particular set of questions about U.S. history, culture, and society.

Career Outlook
The American Studies major is appropriate for students who want a solid liberal arts experience that focuses on the United States. It is excellent for those preparing for teaching careers or a wide-ranging background as preparation for study of the law, public administration, city planning, library and museum work, and/or specialized graduate study.

Comparative and World Literature
Comparative Literature is a way of studying world literature. It is a literary discipline designed to go beyond the chronological, geographic, and linguistic boundaries of individual national literatures.

Undergraduate Program
The Bachelor of Arts and Minor in Comparative and World Literature are interdisciplinary programs that provide students with a global perspective through the reading and analysis of literatures from multiple traditions. Students develop a university-level understanding of what different cultures have in common as well as what makes each culture unique. The study of comparative literature also seeks to establish relationships between literature and other fields, from the arts and sciences to folklore and religion. In addition to taking courses in comparative literature and various national literatures (in the original languages and translation), students also learn methods and techniques of literary analysis and comparison.

Graduate Program
The Master of Arts in Comparative Literature combines the objectives of graduate study in foreign languages and literature with an emphasis on the intercultural and international aspects of literature. The goal of the program is to provide graduate training in subjects common to more than one national literature. Research work in the program is directed toward the problems of literary theory and analysis, genre studies, and literary history.

Career Outlook
The B.A. and Minor in Comparative and World Literature are designed for students who wish to gain an interdisciplinary and broad liberal arts education. The undergraduate degree also provides a sound foundation for students who wish to continue work in literature at the graduate level or to pursue graduate study in other areas. Students find that the program provides a rich background for teaching in English, foreign languages and literature, the humanities, and liberal arts, as well as for other varied careers.

The graduate degree in Comparative Literature is of particular value for students who intend to pursue a doctoral degree in comparative literature, English, foreign language and literature, interdisciplinary humanities, or who plan to teach at the middle school, high school, or community college levels.

Humanities

Undergraduate Program
The Humanities B.A. and minor programs offer students an understanding of the creative practices, cultural values, and insights of diverse human communities, past and present. Humanities majors learn to interpret, compare, and integrate various objects of humanistic study, such as literature, music, visual culture, comics and graphic narrative, architecture and urban space, philosophy, and cultural theory, as they explore the important questions that humans have faced.

Graduate Program
The M.A. in Humanities is an interdisciplinary program that emphasizes the integrative study of culture, ideas, and the arts, with special concern for the questions of value—moral, intellectual, cultural, and aesthetic—that are inherent in major human expressions. The program requires 30 units of coursework, which includes core courses, electives that can be drawn from any relevant MA program in the college, and the culminating experience (thesis or exam).

Career Outlook
With this integrative approach to American and world cultures, the humanities major provides an excellent foundation for jobs in public service, business, law, education, and the arts. Practical training in a specific professional field (TESOL, journalism, museum work, etc.) may well be taken in conjunction with the major or the minor in humanities. Those earning the M.A. are qualified to search for a position at a community college and are well prepared for Ph.D. programs in several humanities fields.

Video Game Studies

The minor in Video Game Studies is an interdisciplinary program that examines the many ways that video games intersect with our lives. We recognize video games as a uniquely complex media that we encounter through many different modes of experience: as games, stories, challenges, escapes, vehicles of self-creation, platforms for interaction with others, marketed commodities, cultural representations, and so much more.

This program is designed to introduce you to the complexity and excitement of many different forms of studying video games. It is not directly about making video games. Rather, it introduces students to ongoing scholarship, research projects, and disciplinary approaches to the study of video games, while also building potential bridges into vibrant fields of both study and industry.
